April saw a reversal of fortune in the market, with a sharp move to the downside. After a runup of around 20% from last November this reversal was not unexpected, but as usual impossible to time. Unfortunately, markets do not move in straight lines, and need time to consolidate and breathe before making their next move – and we need to remain ready and prepared for whatever the next move may be.

Hedge Fund Clone strategy (20% of portfolio)

This strategy invests in stocks favoured by the World’s leading Hedge Funds.

Even the bulletproof NVDA(-4%) lost money in April. The clone strategy was our worst performing strategy for the month, with UBER being our worst stock (-14%).

Global Asset Allocation strategy (40% of portfolio)

This system invests in the 3 strongest Global Asset classes.

Real Estate(-8%) hurt this system the most in April, and is now out of the portfolio. With 3 of the 5 asset classes below their 10 Month Moving averages, 1/3 of this allocation will move to cash in May.

US Sector strategy (40% of portfolio)

This strategy invests in the 3 strongest sectors of the US market.

Technology was our worst sector in April(-5.7%). The other 2 sectors, Financials and communications were in line with the market.

No change in the portfolio going into May.

I am going to keep updating this table as a reminder of what our results would have looked like had we employed the current strategy from the beginning of the Fund’s life. Annual return would have been 15.0% pa.

Whilst past returns are no guarantee of future results, these results are exactly what I was looking to achieve when starting the Fund – Slightly better than index returns, with less volatility and drawdown. Hindsight is a wonderful thing, and it is easy to look back and go “what if”, but I do believe that we have taken the lessons doled out to us over the last few years, made the necessary adjustments, and are much stronger due to that going forward!
